Old Goa

Old Goa is a UNESCO world heritage site and is famed for its opulent buildings and churches reminiscent of the glory days of «Golden Goa». Goa's former capital was considered the 'Rome of the East'. You can still sense that grandeur as you wander what's left of the city, with its towering churches and cathedrals and majestic convents. Some of the most imposing churches and cathedrals are still in use and are remarkably well preserved, while other historical buildings have become museums or simply ruins. Old Goa is approximately 10 kilometres east of the state capital Panaji.

Location Map

Carambolim

Carambolim also known as Karmali or Kormbolle for the locals is a small village in Goa that is situated at about 12 kms from Panjim in the Tiswadi taluka. It is the first village one comes across on one's way from Velha Goa. It is one of the well known places in Goa due to the Carambolim Lake which is a well known birding site.

There is an old Church in Carambolim that is dedicated to St. John which was built sometime during 1714

Carambolim also has a railway station which is the third important station of the Konkan Railway in Goa. The railway station here is known as the Carambolim Railway Station or the Karmali Train Station.

Casa De Reis, which means «House of the Royals», is thus aptly located very close to railway station, 2 km from Old Goa in this ecologically, culturally & historically rich, tiny cozy village of Goa.
